

Company expansion for second year running

Following the success of last year's expansion, TSGE, the European scientific regulatory consultancy group, has recently appointed a further 10 people, increasing its team from 24 to 34 staff.

TSGE welcomes team leaders Catherine Alhaddad and Claire Moloney who were previously with Rivendell International together with regulatory consultants Adam Shannon, Anne-Laure Guihur, David Brady, Louise Duffy, Marie Halton and Niamh Cafferky. They will be based in Ireland. Phil Branford, previously with Covance and Anna Rowbotham from the Health and Safety Laboratory, join the UK team as regulatory consultants. They all bring a wealth of experience in chemistry, environmental science and toxicology.

As a leading European consultancy, TSGE provides regulatory advice and technical support to companies wishing to acquire and maintain registrations of chemical products across the EU.

TSGE's expertise in human health, environmental fate and behaviour, ecotoxicology, physical and analytical chemistry and efficacy, has put the company at the forefront in delivering a quality regulatory and registration service.

TSGE has offices in the UK, Ireland, Spain and Slovenia. TSGE is part of the TSG group of consulting companies and is a subsidiary of the law firm McKenna Long & Aldridge LLP.
